CivicView is a civic-engagement software platform serving U.S. residents. We aggregate publicly-available data on elected officials at the federal, state, and local level — voting records, public statements, bill sponsorships — and provide subscribers with tools to track, engage with, and respond to their elected representatives. The platform is non-partisan and does not endorse any candidate, party, or position. Revenue comes from a $5/month consumer subscription. Users include citizens, verified representatives, and declared candidates.

CivicView is a civic-technology company providing a non-partisan platform that strengthens the connection between U.S. residents and their elected officials. The platform surfaces publicly-available data on federal, state, and local representatives — voting records, public statements, sponsored legislation, and official actions — and provides subscribers with tools to track those officials, respond to their positions through structured polls and comments, and verify their own identity as constituents. CivicView is editorially neutral by design: we do not endorse candidates, parties, or positions, and our content moderation policies enforce that stance across the platform. Our mission is to lower the cost of informed civic engagement for ordinary citizens while preserving the integrity of public discourse.

2. Article — Benefit Corporation Status

Paste the text below into Sunbiz's Optional Provisions or Article Other Provisions text area when filing the Florida Profit Corporation Articles of Incorporation. This language establishes Benefit Corporation status under Florida Statutes sections 607.5005-607.5008.

ARTICLE — BENEFIT CORPORATION STATUS

The corporation is a benefit corporation under sections 607.5005 through 607.5008 of the Florida Statutes. The corporation has elected benefit corporation status to pursue, in addition to the purpose of engaging in any lawful business activity, the general public benefit of creating a material positive impact on society and the environment, taken as a whole, through its business operations.

The specific public benefit purposes of the corporation are:

- (a) To strengthen the connection between U.S. residents and their elected representatives by providing free, non-partisan access to publicly-available information about those officials' actions, votes, and stated positions; and
- (b) To promote informed civic engagement and democratic participation by providing tools that enable verified constituents to respond to, track, and engage with the elected officials who represent them, on an editorially neutral platform that does not endorse any candidate, party, or political position.

In addition to the duties set forth in section 607.0830, Florida Statutes, the directors of the corporation shall, in discharging their duties, consider the effects of any action or inaction on:

- (i) the shareholders of the corporation;
- (ii) the employees and workforce of the corporation;
- (iii) the interests of customers and other persons benefiting from the public-benefit purposes stated above;
- (iv) community and societal factors, including those of each community in which the corporation has offices or operations;
- (v) the local and global environment;
- (vi) the short-term and long-term interests of the corporation, including benefits that may accrue from its long-term plans and the possibility that those interests may be best served by the continued independence of the corporation; and
- (vii) the ability of the corporation to accomplish its public-benefit purposes.

Why this language matters: Florida doesn't have a separate "Benefit Corporation" filing form. You file as a regular Profit Corporation, then add this article to the AOI. The language above satisfies the three statutory requirements: (1) explicit election of Benefit Corp status, (2) at least one specific public benefit purpose, (3) director consideration duties.

Post-formation obligations: Once incorporated, you'll need to (a) prepare an Annual Benefit Report describing how CivicView pursued its public-benefit purposes — made publicly available on your website, not filed with the state; and (b) document director consideration of the seven factors above in board meeting minutes once you have a board.
